THE EVENING POST.

WASHINGTON, WEDNESDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 26, 1888.

LOGAN'S RESTING PLACE.

THE GENERAL'S BEMAINS PLACED IN THE MORTUARY CHAPEL.

Simple Ceremonies Over the Bier of the Hero-A Scene of Impressive Beauty-The Guard of Soldiers Presented with Tokens of Appreciation for Their Long Vigil-A Magnificent Sepulchre.

Two years ago to-day General John A.

Logan died. And this morning's bright sun was the A. Roeber, lamp bracket; George N. Saegmaller, equatorial mounting for telepoopes and Samuel I. Scott, dental engine the Rock Creek Cometery a week less than two years ago. To-day was the day set by Mrs. Logan for the removal of the General's remains to the new chapel in the United States National Soldiers'

Home Cemetery, About 10 o'clock the casket was re moved by the guard that has kept watch over the dead General's remains there two years from the marble vault and placed on a couple of pedestals in the roadway in front of the vault.

The lid of the casket was removed from over the face, and the bright Decem ber sunlight streamed in on the dead hero's features.

The face was obscured by a white frost like veil, resulting from the unventilated dampness of the tomb, but the sweeping mustache and long black hair showed no change for their two year's burial.

The strongly moulded nose and promi-nent eyebrows could be traced through the veil that the two years in the tomb more than this could be seen and the face would not be recognized out for the sweeping mustache.

Then the lid was replaced over the dead General's face and the big flag that has draped the casket since it was placed in the vault seemed to warm in the pleasant sunlight as it was festooned over the casket as it stood in the road-

An artilleryman paced up and down the road beside the casket, and a hearse drawn by two white horses stood just ahead waiting for the dead General's ramily to arrive. A few minutes after 11 o'clock four carriages came slowly over the smooth cemetery road under the evergreens.

In the first was Rev. Dr. George H. Corey of the Metropolitan M. E. Church and his son. In the second was the dead General's son, John A. Logan, jr., and his wife, and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Shepard of Chicago.

The third contained Major and Mrs. william Tucker and their son, Logan, and Miss Mary Brady of Chicago.

In the fourth were Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Mullett and Mr. A. B. Hall, formerly secretary to General Logan.

The carriages rolled silently, but for the crackling of the ground, passed the house, and the flag-draped coffin bathed in the bright sunlight, and turning around took up their places below the

The six soldiers who composed the guard over the tomb stacked their mus-kets to one side of the coffin, and lifting the casket, slid it gently into the hearse Then the guard formed three on each side of the hearse, with arms reversed, and the little cortege passed out under the arch of dark green cedars, through the cemetery gates and between the white columns bearing the names of Washington, Jackson, Grant and Scott that mark the entrance to the Soldiers

Home Cemetery.
Past the tombs of a half-score of famous generals the cortege wound to the new memorial chapel that is the last resting place of the illustrious General's body.

As the hearse stopped in front of the chapel the guard of artillerymen came to a halt, stacked their arms again and lrew the flag-festooned coffin out from the hearse. Placing their brass-spiked helmets on top of the casket, they bore it through the sunlight to the door of the chapel. The little group of relatives who followed the remains to their permanent resting-place got out of their carriages and formed a little group about the preacher as he stood on the first granite step at one side of the wide door to the chapel. A PICTURE OF IMPRESSIVE BEAUTY. It was an impressively beautiful picure that the bright December sun ighted-the little group of the dead General's family, back of them the guard drawn up in a rigid line with the sun-light glittering on the brass spikes of their helmets and their polished muskets, and across the narrow roadway a group of forty or fifty veterans from the Home across the way, their pared grey locks fanned by the south breeze as they paid their last tribute to their dead General The minister, standing at the door of the chapel, with the sun streaming down on his white hair, repeated a short, earnest prayer that our country may be blessed with more Logans, and that his memory may ever be a guiding star to honesty, bravery and fidelity.

As his solemn "Amen" was echoed by the little group of old soldiers, the bell in the tower of the Soldiers' Home building, that has sheltered so many of th dead General's soldiers, rang out twelve mellow notes that sounded like a benediction in their soft sweetness.

DEDICATION OF THE CHAPEL

There were no further services or cere monies. The dedication of the chapel is to be deferred until after Mrs. Logan's return from Europe.

Then the artiflerymen removed the flag from the casket and placed it inside a heavy oak box and, its lid was screwed in place. This, in turn, was pushed slowly and reverently into the heavy iron sarcophagus resting on the brick floor of

The iron plate that closed the end was put in place, and then began the deafening ring of the workmen's hammers as a word from Major Tucker the workmen stopped and the dead General's son, taking a pasteboard box in his hand, ad-vanced to the line formed by the guard at one side of the entrance to the chapel.

A TESTIMONIAL OF APPRECIATION. He said: "Sergeant Ford and men of the Guard: It is fitting that you should be thanked for your two years' vigilant guard over the remains of my dead father. You have but done your duty as soldiers, et you have done it with a vigilance and idelity that I am unable to fitly thank you for Your conduct has been above criticism. You have shown entire fidelity to your country and your army. Through sun and snow, through heat and cold, day wavered.

For all this we want to give you an Seven hands toucned seven caps in city in the world.

handed them to him one by one, he pinned on the breast of each artillery-man's blue cost a gold badge formed of a medallion, bearing General Logan's head in bas-relief on one side and an inscription on the other hanging from a bar bearing the one word "fidelity."

The badges were given to Sergeant Ford, and privates Hamilton, Lesicski, Bondra, Timm, Carmody and Gibson. Across the roadway on the grass, op-posite the chapel, were placed the floral pieces that had covered the dead Gen-eral's coffin when it was placed in the Hutchinson vault.

There were two pieces, representing There were two pieces, representing cartridge boxes, from the Logan Invincibles of Baltimore; a pillow, bearing two crossed swords, from the ladies of the Garfield Hospital; a corps badge, from the Saratoga City Corps; a wreath, from Surgeon-Géneral Hamilton; an anchor, with the words "We Miss You in Illinois," from Chicago; a reproduction in flowers of a general's shoulder strap from the Grand Army of the Potomae, three pieces from Chevalier tomac, three pieces from Chevalier Bayard Commandery, a crown from the Young Men's Republican Club of Phil-adelphia, an anchor bearing a heart in red immortelles from Mrs. Leland Stanford and three smaller flower pieces that were made by Private Wilkinson, who was one of the guard until his term of enlistment expired After the dead General's remains had been riveted into the iron sarcophagus the flag was drooped over it as it had been in the temporary tomb: the flower pieces were grouped about in the chapel and a bunch of lillies and immortelles that Mrs. Tucker brought was placed on the big iron box.

The ringing blows of the workmen's hammers, riveting in place the iron plate that will guard the dead General's remains, recommenced as soon as the fu neral party left and echoed through the silent gravevard as the sun dropped behind the westward trees, a last salute to the dead General.

It is solid and substantial as well as ornamental, and it is built to stand, as it is intended for a family sepulchre. The whole building is of Maine granite, the roof consisting of solid slabs of that stone about twenty feet in length and weighing Heavy oaken doors will be put in to keep the rain and snow from beating in. As a further protection the chapel will be connected by electric burglar alarm de-vices with the lodge of the superintendent of the cemetery.

A BILL THAT IS BEING VIGOROUSLY PUSHED

The House Committee on Territories Being Beseiged By Letters and Applications-A Threat to Blockade Legislation Made By the Friends of the Movement.

The bill now before Congress to open up to settlement the Oklahoma country in Indian Territory has caused more increase in the postal revenues of the country than perhaps any measure in recent years.

Members of the House Committee on Members of the House Committee on Territories have, since Congress assem-bled, been flooded with letters from the West and Southwest urging the early opening of the country, and the dingy room in the basement of the Capitol, where the Committee on Territories meets, is filled with letters and petitions in favor of it.

The bill is now before the House, and the bill is now occore the House, and a determined effort will be made after the holidays to secure its passage. However, opposition to the bill is strong. Those favoring it say that unless the bill can come up squarely and the House be given an opportunity to discuss the matter on its merits, no legislation shall be transacted by this Congress outside of the appropriation bills.

This threat comes from a prominent member of the Committee on Ter-ritories, and can readily be carried into execution by obstructive tactics. This matter promises to assume an importance second only to the admission of the Ter-

THE CAPTAIN IN THE TOWER. How the Commander of a New Cruiser Will be Protected.

The cruiser Charleston, recently launched at San Francisco, says the Maritime Reporter, will depend entirely upon steam for propulsion, since she will only have two short masts, carrying a little fore and aft sail-merely enough to steady the ship in a heavy sea. Each mast will have a military top, in which a revolving Hotchkiss gun will be mounted on a little railroad, so that it can be run around the top and fired in any direc-

The guns are also pro-tected from small projectiles by two-inch circular steel shields placed around the

The machine gun fire will evidently be very destructive in future naval engagements, particularly if two ships come to

It is very necessary that the captain and the men who aim and load the gun should be protected from the storm of small shot, since the loss of a captain early in an action would be severely felt, and the depletion of the guns' crews would silence the guns. Experiments have been made in France to determine the probable effect of machine guns in the future navai battles. Wooden dum mies representing the men at the guns were placed on board an old ship and fire opened from a number of machine guns at a range that would be useless in sea lights, and an examination after a few minutes' firing showed that few of the dummies had escaped.

No Leap-Year in 1900.1

From the Baleigh (N. C.) News-Observer Although the year 1900 will be divisible by four without a remainder, it will not be leap-year. Twelve years must clapse before the interesting event takes place, but it was just the same in 1800 and 1700, but not in 1600, for that was a leap-year, and the year 2000 will be a leap-year also. Why this should be is a problem. To explain in detail would be a tiresome task, but it rests on the princi-ple that a difference of eleven minutes per day exists between actual time and calendar time. Thus a year is computed 365‡ days, three years being 365 days long and the fourth 366 days. In fact, the year is 365 days five hours and fortyfive minutes long, or eleven minutes short of 3654 days.

From the American Hairdres The ladies have been trying to let the hair fall down on the nape and not to wear it high on the bead as formerly. But I think the attempt will prove abortive. Young ladies with pretty necks like to show them and rebel at this decree. There is unquestionably intellect and a thousand other charms displayed in the high dressing of the hair. Whenever the unward line of the forehead is continued, it is feit that mental dignity is given. Of all the weapons a woman possesses either for good or evil, their expression lies in her hair. It is the low head, with loose wandaring tresses which, from the days of the sirens to those of Louis XIV., has most undentably revealed the Delilah. Gather them up and the woman is reformed. On this account loose, flowing hair is only suitable for children or very young girls. A woman with her hair over her The ladies have been trying to let the hair hair is only suitable for children or very young girls. Foraker and the Cabinet. CHICAGO, Dec. 26 .- A Tribune special from Columbus, Ohio, says: Colonel W. R. Holloway of the Indianapolis News was in the city yesterday, and called on Governor Foraker at yesterday, and called on Governor Foraker at his residence on Broad street. It is under-stood that Colonel Hiloway's visit had refer-ence to the Cabinet, and his visit from head-quarters gave prominence to the rumor that he bore a message to Governor Foraker, with a view to learning whether in certain contin-gencies he would accept a Cabinet position should one be offered him. In an interview last night Governor Foraker refused to say what the object of Holloway's visit was. He came over from Neukaist night in response to a telegram to meet Holloway.

A Destructive Fire Enges in Marbishead,

Massachusetty.
MARBLEHEAD, MASS., Dec. 26.—Fire started about 10 o'clock last night in the basement of D. B. H. Power's furniture store on Pleasant street, and is said to have been caused by the explosion of benzine. At midnight it was estimated that more than seven acres had been burned over, and that the entire loss will be at least $500,000.

Among the buildings that were burned A FIRE.

A Mong the buildings that were burned are Powers' block, Reichabite block, William Goldthwart's three-story building, Monroe's large shoe factory, a three-story block occupied by dry-goods stores and the Boston branch grocery on the the Cause of the Affair—Incendiarism for Burglarizing Parposes Suspected.

factory and other buildings.
Two families lived in the Power block, where the fire originated, but fortunately escaped. Nearly the same territory was burned over about twelve years ago. The fire started in nearly the same place. Many of last night's victims were also sufferers by the former fire.

The shoe business, which has been quiet for several months past, was just starting up, and many operatives will now be thrown out of work the entire winter. The fire is still burning. It is impossible to get definite losses, owing to the great excitement prevailing among all classes.

COUNTING THE COST.

MARRIEHEAD, MASS., Dec. 26,-About 2:30 the fire was gotten under control, having burned over a tract from eight to nine acres in the business centre of the town. The burned district covers the space on both sides of Pleasant street from Anderson street to Spring street, both sides of Spring street except a school-house, both sides of Essex street, School street, and a number of buildings on Nicholas Hill.

The entire business portion of the town is burned. A Marblehead gentleman counted up thirty-six buildings that he could recall which had been destroyed, and he said he knew that there must be half as many more. The number was generally placed at about sixty outside the shoe factories. The buildings con-sumed were all light frame structures and the only brick building destroyed was the Grand Army Hall and fire department headquarters. There were no accidents.

The total loss is put at from $500,-000 to $000,000. There are some heavy insurances. At least 1,500 men, repre-senting 500 families, are thrown out of employment.

THE HAYTIEN INDEMNITY. Nothing Known in Washington About a

Demand for It. NEW YORK, Dec. 26 .- The New York Tribune's Washington correspondent says: Nothing is known in Washington of the indemnity demanded from Admiral Luce by the Haytien Government. Secretary Whitney said to-night (Tuesday): "No instructions were given to Admiral Luce in regard to an indemnity in money. Of course this is a matter in money. Of course this is a matter entirely within the province of the State Department, but if such instructions had been given to the Admiral they would have passed through the Navy Department. As a matter of fact, however, they have not and the statement that Admiral Luce demanded $200,000 to indemnify the owners and $150,000 to indemnify the care laws all anthority.

"I have received no communication from Hayti since the announcement was made that the vessel was released. Neither was Admiral Luce instructed to demand a salute of the American flag. The customary proceedings in such mat-ters, however, is for the vessel visiting a foreign country to exchange salutes with the fort or with a vessel lying at anchor in the harbor and flying the flag of the country. This Admiral Luce may have done. It is a mere matter of form." The Haytien Minister, Mr. Preston, likewise has no knowledge of any money indemnity having been demanded. Secretary Bayard could not be reache, Fight at a Christmas Party.
